Practices

- Administrative Law
- Corporate & Transactional
- Disputes and Litigation
- Intellectual Property
- Labor and Employment

Ken has over 25 years of experience as a corporate attorney and litigator serving both public and private companies. Ken's extensive experience began as a litigator at Littler Mendelson, the nation's largest labor and employment law firm. From there, Ken joined Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, a global "AmLaw 50" law firm, as a corporate and securities attorney.

Before joining Rogoway Law Group, Ken was the President and General Counsel of StemCells, Inc., a publicly-traded biotech company focused on developing human neural stem cells as a medical treatment for several diseases and disorders of the central nervous system.

Over the course of his career, Ken has negotiated hundreds of financings and strategic transactions, including mergers and divestitures, equity and debt offerings, corporate restructurings, joint ventures, IP licenses, employment and contractor agreements, and various business collaborations of different types.
